Medi

It's been a while since Medi took care of our troubles with his Medicine Show produced by none other than Dave Stewart. An effective therapy that let him to travel the world by strumming his guitar for Emilie Simon, and beating his drums for his friend Charlie Winston. As Memphis had the Sfax label, New-York Atlantic records and so many more, he wished that Nice, where so many famous artists have recorded and performed, should also get a label to make its music scene shine in the future. A musical bet symbolised by a hand flicking a small coin (the famous dime). Born in 2014 in a popular area of Nice with a name that seemed predestined ("Bon Voyage"), the world of "Dime On" then multiplied into production, phonographic publishing, a festival, and also a café where regulars of the big stage rediscover the warmth of small showcases with friends. But it is in his new role as a smuggler and detector of young up-and-coming artists that the composer, multi-instrumentalist and producer now seems to take the most pleasure. The project "Live Attitude" has already allowed him to detect raw and unsuspected talents of all ages.

The encyclopedist of gin
#alcools

Living between Dubai and Nice, Elie Hannouche has become a connoisseur of a famous juniper drink. He has collected the bottles and savoured the different tastes at the counters of the most select hotel bars - this earned him the nickname of "GinTonicologist".

Dobrunia Design
#decoration

Whether its interior decoration or the creation of ceramic objects, Dobrunia has the good taste and a little "je-ne-sais-quoi" that transforms both the banal and the exotic. In her showroom on rue Miron, she will perhaps share some of her secrets with you during her workshops for adults and children.

Tourisme Parallèle
#book

A figure in the glam and rock & roll scenes with the Dum Dum Boys, and also Niçois nights with his electric aperitifs, in "Tourism Parallèle" Didier Balducci compiles the funny and corrosive chronicles published in the fanzine Zero, the international magazine. Completely useless; so indispensable to read!

Berenice Abbott
#photos

Berenice Abbott's magnificent documentary on urban mutations in New York (1898-1991) has become a work of art in its own right. The history and success of photography have given her reason, she who professed in her time that "photography (had to) walk alone" when she was only in the shadow of painting.

Pièces-à-porter
#fashion

Seasonal collections, dealer circuits, sales, trends; over the years Alexandra Ferrarini has come back from all of this with the desire to create. Free from these constraints, these pieces-to-wear create a cloakroom out of time and, like no other, breathe creativity and makes the silhouette sublime.

Layers

"Nice is not an easy city to understand, it works in layers" a friend told me when I told him of our desire to develop our media in the Baie des Anges. Long impervious to each other, they cultivated a relationship which was reassuring but, it must be admitted, rather annoying. Like the tramway opening new lines, things are fortunately changing, encouraged by younger generations and neo-newcomers. Privileged citizens give up their prejudices to push open the doors of old factories as consumers with more modest incomes are able to afford a rare moment in an exceptional place. It is to these people that our city guide addresses itself; those who want to meet in the heart of the city, in the trendy neighbourhoods, as well as in outlying areas where old shops find a second youth through artisan-creators. Life is too short to put on blinkers, and the city is too long to only see part of it. So follow the guide.
